DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. This action is responsive to an amendment filed on 03/03/2006. Claims 1-20 are pending.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed on 03/03/2006 Remarks have been fully considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection which is deemed appropriate to address all of the needs at this time.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

5. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

6. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kasiviswanathan (US 6,215,857) in view of Solomon et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,809,114).

As to Claims 1,6,11,14-17, with respect to Figures 1-3, Kasiviswanathan teaches a system for enabling a user to access to a voicemail service comprising:

a customer premises equipment (CPE) at a user location for use by a user, the CPE comprising a plurality of character keys for use in dialing a sequence of characters (Figure 2, label 200; col.4, lines 34-39); and a central office switch in communication with the CPE (Figure 1, label 210), the central office switch comprising:

a supplementary service processor, Figure 3, operative to receive the sequence of characters from the CPE, generate a query to a supplementary service database when the sequence of characters is a predetermined n-character messaging sequence where  $n < 7$ , and receive a call forwarding number from the supplementary service database (Figure 3 and Col. 4, lines 40-55);

wherein the central office switch is operative to connect the CPE with a voicemail service in response to the call forwarding number (Figure 3); and wherein the user is allowed to access to the voicemail service and transmit the call forwarding number to the central office switch if the user has access to the voicemail service (Col. 4, lines 55-60).

However, Kasiviswanathan fails to teach the supplementary service database is operative to determine whether the user has access to the voicemail service using a caller identifier. Foladare teaches the supplementary service database is operative to determine whether the user has access to the voicemail service using a caller identifier (col.13, lines 9-33). Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Kasiviswanathan to incorporate the supplementary service database is operative to determine whether the user has access to the voicemail service using a caller identifier in order to determine an authorized caller to leave the message.

As to Claim 2, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the central office switch is further operative to prevent access to the voicemail service in response to a determination that the user does not have access to the voicemail service (Figure 3).

Art Unit: 2614

As to Claim 3, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the central office switch further comprises a router (Col. 4, lines 48-55).

As to Claims 4,18, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the central office switch further comprises an error handler for sending an error message to the CPE in response to a determination that the user does not have access to the voicemail service (Figure 3).

As to Claims 5,12, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the n-character messaging sequence includes a first '*' star character (Col. 4, lines 7-21).

As to Claims 7,8,13, Kasiviswanathan the system of Claim 6, wherein the 3-character messaging sequence includes a first '*' star character followed by a two number sequence (Col. 4, lines 7-21).

As to Claim 9, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the supplementary service processor further comprises a routing table for storing a call forwarding number for a user that has access the voicemail service (Col. 4, lines 14-27).

As to Claim 10, Kasiviswanathan teaches the system of Claim 1, wherein the supplementary service database further comprises a redirecting identifier for connecting the user to an error message when the user is temporarily prevented from using the predetermined n-character messaging sequence to access the voicemail service (Figure 3).

Art Unit: 2614

As to Claim 19, Kasiviswanathan teaches the method of Claim 16, wherein (b) comprises transmitting a DVMA caller identifier from the central office switch to a supplementary service database (Col. 4, lines 40-48).

As to Claim 20, Kasiviswanathan teaches the method of Claim 19, wherein (c) further comprises verifying whether the user identified by the caller identifier subscribes to the voicemail service (Col. 4, lines 40-48).
